Carryl,

Thanks for the email, and thank you for following up with the property owner. He was included in the original email with the understanding that he is responsible for the property; however, the extra effort at communication with him should alert him to the importance of an appropriately quick response due to the public visibility of the site. Please keep me posted as you have indicated.

Travis,

Please also keep me posted as to the anticipated removal date for the drum.

Thanks,

Mark,

Thank you for passing along the resident's inquiry. We understand his concerns and we will remove the soil drums as soon as possible. We've also notified the property owner regarding the fence. In February, there was a fence around the property. As you know, Chevron does not own the property, but we can pass along the comment about the overgrown weeds to the property owner as well.

We will let you know once we hear back from the property owner about the fence.

Regards,

Carryl

The photos were likely too large for Chevron's server (weird that Chevron's limit is so small). Here are snippets of the three photos.

Importance: High

Carryl, Alex, and Travis,

I am passing along the following message which I received this morning from a local community member (without email address). He has comments and photographs (attached) in regards to the unprotected drums and weeds on the lot. The message was additionally sent to Keith Carson, Alameda County Board of Supervisors, and a local media contact (Bay Area News Group). While not an unreasonable length of time for the drums to be present, ACEH requests that the removal of the drums be prioritized and the general condition of the property be maintained. Please let me know when the drums will be removed so that I can communicate this with Mr. Green. Thank you for attending to this potential problem quickly.

Hello Mr. Detterman,

The property located at 890 MacArthur Blvd., a former Chevron Gas Station, sits unprotected from the public with two sealed 55 gallon drums labelled:

This Container on Hold Pending Analysis

Soil/Concentration Core
Generation Date 2/27/15
Origins of Materials Site Borings
Address 890 MacArthur Blvd.
Contact Chevron

Do Not Tamper with container
Authorized Personnel Only

The site is overgrown with weeds and has no protective fence to prevent children from playing with those drums. Would you want this for a next door neighbor? I have attached some pictures for your review.

Please take Immediate action. Make the owner, Chevron, protect this West Oakland Neighborhood.

Sincerely,

Gerald Green
Retired Gas Engineer
