Hi Pat,

Thanks for the catch; that was my bad. I did forget to check that function as I was thinking a later revised date would have reflected document finalization after all comments were received. But in reality it wouldn't be needed.

Regardless, you are correct that we'll need to disagree on this one. This is an extensive complicated contentious comingled contaminant plume at free phase concentrations that involves a minimum of 7 sites, many now residential (commercial / residential). This site is currently the most downgradient extent of the plume.

I will post these comments to Geotracker to document our error, but to also document our remaining level of concern for the site.

Best,

Mark-

There has been a change in GeoTracker that allows one to track the history of uploads to the data base. Use the "History" button and you'll see the document was uploaded on 2/7/2011.

This happens to be one of those cases we agree to disagree. Our main reason for recommending closure is that no remedial actions have occurred since 1995, 16 years ago. Monitoring is not remediation.

Pat
